HOST: I just found out that the more alcohol a person drinks and the earlier in life they start, the higher their risk for at least seven different types of cancer can climb! That's real. And it's inspiring me to talk to the kids in my life about the link between underage drinking and cancer. Having short, casual conversations with children about alcohol and its connection to cancer, starting around age 8, can make a big difference. And it's easier than you think!
